Sevdalina Aleksandrova

Sevdalina was extremely helpful in keeping the focus on the important issues during the entire mediation. And when we were stuck, she just kept moving the discussion forward."

Client Feedback

Overview

Sevdalina Aleksandrova is a mediator and lawyer with extensive experience in real estate, contractual disputes, commercial and family mediations. She is also among the leading mediation trainers in Bulgaria with thousands of mediators, lawyers and judges trained over a period of more than 10 years. In addition to that she is an expert in development of successful mediation programs from scratch, international consultant and author. Currently, she is the Vice-President of the Center for Dispute Resolution, Sofia, Bulgaria.

Professional Background

Sevdalina has over 10 years' experience as a lawyer, mediator, mediation trainer and international mediation consultant. She served as a Manager and Mediator in the establishment of the first commercial mediation centers in Bulgaria within the USAID Commercial Law Reform Program in Bulgaria, and took part in the incorporation of the Professional Association of Mediators in Bulgaria, where she was a President and Vice-President for a period of 6 years. At this position she co-managed a project resulting in the development of an internationally recognized structure, such as the Settlement Center at the Sofia Regional Court (acknowledged as a model by the European Parliament in its Resolution (2011/2026(INI))). She also served as an expert in various international projects focused on promoting cross-border mediation. She has been a mediation trainer leading certification mediation trainings and various trainings for legal professionals, specified under the Coaching section below.

In addition to that, she has been involved in the legislative process and in the legal analysis of mediation legislation in 2006 and 2015. In this period, she also gained extensive experience as a mediator in various fields, mostly in contractual disputes, real estates, commercial and family cases. In 2012 she co-founded the Center for Dispute Resolution, Sofia, where she is currently a Vice-President, mediation trainer and mediator

Expertise

- Commercial & Corporate
- Healthcare & Personal Matters
- Construction, Property & Planning
- Public Sector & Governance
- Employment & Workplace

Dispute Experience

Commercial Contracts

- Breach of contract for the delivery of medical equipment where the purchaser ordering the equipment refused payment. After exploring in mediation the reasons for that a scheme for deferred payment of the consumables and part of the equipment was agreed on, with the rest of the equipment returned as allegedly unsuitable for the purposes of the purchaser.
- Various disputes related to breach of commercial contracts, mostly regarding unpaid price by the purchaser due to claimed defects. Resolved based on the future interest of continuing doing business together or the debtor bringing value (introducing the creditor to new clients or business partners) or paying in kind instead of direct payment of the due sum, or agreeing on deferred or reduced payment schemes.

Matrimonial Finance

- Mediating various disputes involving the distribution of property between spouses in process of divorce or immediately after divorce. In most of the cases releasing the pressure between the ex-spouses was the first crucial step to the resolution. Afterwards, focusing on their vision for the future and the purposes for which they needed the real estates, such as living there, receiving income from them, selling them or ensuring property for their children, as well as discussing the actual contribution of each of them for the purchase of these properties, were the keys to reaching a lasting mediated agreement.

- Mediating various disputes between ex-partners involving bank credits and mortgages on real estates bought during their marriage. Helping them analyse and evaluate their priorities and all options regarding their joint property and credit in order to find a way to pay it together, sell it, or transfer it to their children or to one of them, who is able to continue paying the mortgage on his/her own after paying the other spouse his/her share of the property.

Partnership & Shareholder

- Numerous cases between two shareholders in limited liability companies willing to leave the company or acquire the sole ownership over the company. In most of the cases both shareholders achieved the desired result of having a fully owned company (one of them new one, and the other – keeping the old company). This result came mainly as a consequence of clarifying what they would be willing to give in exchange for acquiring what they considered their priority. Some of them preferred the freedom of a new company and distributing some of the clients among themselves, while others worked for keeping the old company because of the brand and the licenses it had. The reasonable evaluation of the cash they would be able to receive for their share in the company (including during possible litigation) was in all cases one of the most decisive factors for reaching an agreement.

Property

- Mediating a dispute related to the conclusion of a real estate purchase and sale transaction where the purchaser did not want to risk paying an advance payment directly to the seller and the seller refused to enter into the transaction without receiving the payment directly and immediately after the preliminary agreement. They did not like the option of an escrow account because of the costs and time associated with it and after exploring various other options and the interest of both parties to close the deal, they agreed on another option to have the money kept by a third party chosen by them, suitable for both of them.
- Mediating a dispute between two heirs holding together the property rights over numerous real estates. They had difficulties deciding how to distribute the income from the estates for the past few years and subsequently put an end to their joint property. After reaching an agreement regarding the contribution of each of them to the management and repair of the properties they decided upon the distribution of the rent price in accordance with their quota in the real estates for a fixed period in the future and agreed on parameters and term for the future sale of one of the estates.

- Dispute between more than ten co-owners of numerous properties. Mediation was held through their representatives authorized to take decisions and after exploring the priorities of each of the co-owners regarding the real estates, a plan with options about their distribution was prepared to serve for the notary partition of the properties.

Landlord & Tenant

- A dispute over the new price of a leased property upon renewal of a lease agreement, where the long-term interests of the landlord and the tenant were explored by the mediator. Parties reached a long-term agreement reflecting their interests with a clear mechanism for adjustment of the rent over the years.
- A dispute over unpaid rent price for an industrial site and default interests and interests accumulated for a long period. The landlord and the tenant discussed various options for resolving the situation, including the future purchase of the site by the tenant and as it was a specific property, that could be rented or purchased by a very limited number of players on the market, they finally agreed on a deferred payment of the rent price due, and renegotiated the conditions of the lease agreement.

Other Alternative Dispute Resolution

- Numerous family cases, including cross-border.
- Cases between banks and consumers related to abuse of credit cards by third persons.
- Case between municipality and a company regarding a permit for superficies initially refused and granted after mediation clarifying the misunderstanding between them.
