

ADR guide for Corporate Counsel and Executives

CEDR's ADR guide for Corporate Counsel and Executives offers a concise introduction to ADR processes for corporate counsel and other executives involved in dispute management. The Guide was written with the assistance of corporate counsel from a number of leading companies through CEDR's Corporate Counsel Advisory Forum and it aims to address practical business needs.

This useful resource, interspersed with relevant case studies, has four purposes:

- to help executives understand the mediation process and the value it brings to conflict risk management;
- to highlight questions to be addressed in considering or preparing for any potential mediation;
- to illustrate mediation and other ADR applications outside the context of litigation;
- to assist corporate counsel in educating and advising their colleagues, and in working with external lawyers to make mediation effective.

Readership

Corporate counsel, corporate executives including financial directors, chief executives and managers. Solicitors representing clients at mediation.

Contents

In addition to outlining the fundamental basics of ADR, the Guide also examines issues such as: In which business sectors does ADR work?; When to use and not to use ADR; Mediation and litigation compared; Getting the best out of mediation; Mediation as a management tool; The role of corporate counsel and external lawyers; How to win over executives; Model mediation contract clauses; Mediation v arbitration in international cases.

About CEDR (Centre for Effective Dispute Resolution)

CEDR is an independent non-profit organisation supported by multinational business and leading professional bodies and public-sector organisations and was launched in 1990 with the support of The Confederation of British Industry. CEDR's mission is to encourage and develop mediation and other cost-effective dispute resolution and prevention techniques in commercial and public-sector disputes and in civil litigation.

Cost

£30.00 for CEDR members

£40.00 for non-members

For further information or to purchase a copy of the Guide, please contact CEDR on +44 (0) 20 7536 6000 or info@cedr.co.uk.